

Social Work Practices in Remote Areas: A Case Study for Children and Family Social Work in Penghu County

Caleb Hsiao

Director of Penghu Branch Office TCCF

Abstract

The author has served as the director of branch office in a non-profit organization for children and families in Penghu since October 2015. His team provides a set of service programs for the needy in 2016-2018. The programs action started at need assessment and community issues including the declining birthrate, aging population, and migration of young and strong people. The advantages of resources were considered for program developing and operation. Finally, the effect achieves including the needy people get their self-confidence and independent in finance.

Keywords: Remote Areas, Community work, Children, Youth, Families, Poverty