

Community Policy and Community Care for the Aged Society Let the Community “Care” for Us?

Shrsyung Chang

Professor in Department of Social Welfare, National Chung-Cheng University, Taiwan, ROC.

Abstract

What social and historical conditions that could make care provisions by the fallen community possible and feasible in the age of population growing older than ever? Conceptualizing Aged Society as consequences of Modernity, associated with a diagnosis of intended and unintended outcomes emerged from political economic configuration of contemporary Managerial State that endorsed by Neoliberalism, the essay proposes an approach of Holistic Community Policy and suggests the way that makes community care not only feasible but desirable with grounded and sustainable moral ecology.

Keywords: Aged Society, Long-Term Care 2.0 (LTC 2.0), Community model of Integrated Care Service, Total Community Construction, Holistic Community Policies.